

Series "Top Down View" / Earth Top View [September] 2026

Views of Earth from above are one of my recurring themes.

Satellite imagery consistently reveals fascinating structures and surface features of our planet—from mountain ranges, valleys, rivers, and lakes to physical, chemical, and biological data rendered in false color, or clear evidence of environmental change.

The appearance of these images varies significantly depending on the angle of the light.

I call my new experimental series of these works "Earth Top View nnn"—referring to the overhead perspective—with "nnn" representing a sequential number or variant.

They measure 20 x 20 cm. These acrylic paintings are created on cardstock, which is mounted onto a 3 cm thick MDF wood block. The edges are painted white and feature a textured finish. A hole on the back allows the piece to be hung.
